

Schools Where 100% Of Need Is Met Without Loans, Regardless Of Income

Example: For example, let's say your school costs $60,000 per year. The student's parents make just under $55,000 per year. After looking at their FAFSA, their EFC=0 the schools below decide the student's family should not have to contribute financially. The student is awarded the full $60,000 through scholarships, grants, and work study.

Amherst College

Bowdoin College

Claremont McKenna College

Colby College

Columbia University

Davidson College

Harvard University

Haverford College

Pomona College

Princeton University

Swarthmore College

Stanford University

University of Chicago

University of Pennsylvania

Vanderbilt University

Washington and Lee University

Yale University

Schools Where 100% Of Need Is Met With No Loans for Some Incomes

Brown University

Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than $60,000 with assets less than $100,000. Your family will not be expected to make any financial contribution.

Connecticut College

Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than $50,000.

Cornell University

Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than $75,000.

Dartmouth College

Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than $100,000. Your family will not be expected to make any financial contribution.

Duke University

Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than $60,000. Your family will not be expected to make any financial contribution.

Lehigh University

Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than $50,000.

If your family earns between $75,000 and $150,000, your loans will be limited to $2,000 per year.

MIT

Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than $75,000.

Northwestern University

Aid is loan-free if you are a Pell Grant Recipient.

Rice University

Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than $80,000.

Vassar College

Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than $60,000

University of Virginia

Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than 200% of the poverty line and have assets less than $75,000.

Washington University in St. Louis

Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than $75,000.

Wellesley College

Aid is loan-free if your parents earn less than $40,000. Your family will not be expected to make any financial contribution.